New Dealers Split on Dies Quiz Attitude

WASHINGTON — Two kinds of reaction to the new labors of the Dies committee are to be had from New Dealers here. The left-wingers are frankly uneasy. Their attitude is that the Ethiopian hasn't change his skin, and that he is still lurking in the woodpile; that Dies is still "Garner's man"; that he still dislikes organized labor, and that the current exposure of the Jew-baiting reactionaries is simply a build-up to make the committee look good when, presently, it returns to the radicals once more—as, say the left-wingers, it will before long.

Georgia Senator Doubts
Whether Other Nations

TARIFF WAR IS SEEN

Says Other Nations to Seek Ways of Protection Against U. S.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Secretary Wallace's newest cotton proposals were described by Senator George (Dem., Ga.) as an attempt to "escape just criticism" from "collapse" of the cotton program.

Senator George said the cotton conference proposal "is not new," but that "whether exporting nations can be induced or forced by a subsidy or otherwise to consent to a division of world markets among cotton growing nations remains to be seen."

"I hope that it is not an illusive dream," he added. He denounced the subsidy proposal as "abandonment of Democratic party principles."

Against Subsidy Plan

Pointing to the sharp decline in cotton exports mentioned by Wallace, George said this "demonstrates the collapse of the cotton program."

"The remaining step to disaster," he continued, "is involved in the payment of exports to the foreign consumers to induce them to take our cotton."

George predicted the subsidy "policy advocated by the secretary will invite a tariff war on all commodities and products."

"Every nation will seek to protect itself in some way against the United States," he said.

The senator said that in the early days of the administration cotton program, "we were assured again and again by the experts in the Department of Agriculture that our cotton program would stimulate the growth of cotton abroad and would not cut into our world markets."

He said the subsidy proposal was advanced "in order to escape, the just criticism now established by the facts."

George termed "interesting" Wallace's statement that cotton and the South suffered because of "high tariffs on manufactured products."

The senator said the subsidy proposal "must be accompanied with (1) an outright embargo on imports of raw cotton (2) an outright embargo to prevent reimportation of American cotton shipped abroad to the foreign consumer under a subsidy (3) quotas or prohibitive tariffs on manufactured cotton in any and all forms from all manufacturing countries."

Senator George predicted that cotton would lose "most of our home markets if the American consumer is forced to pay more for goods made out of American cotton than foreign."

He said such a policy "will greatly increase the use of all substitutes. It seems tragic to destroy the marketing system of a great product built up over a century by numbers of able and experienced men."

Senator Hatch Also Cool

Senator Hatch (Dem., N. M.), another member of the cotton bloc, said he was skeptical over success of the proposed world conference.

He opposed the subsidy plan, even though the administration might have authority to subsidize exports and could use funds available in the farm appropriation bill.

Among the slightly-left-of-center New Dealers, on the other hand, there is no worry at all. The present probe is looked on as useful, in itself, and if the Dies committee gets after the radicals again and does a more effective job on them than it ever did before, the liberal-but-not-red crowd won't shed any tears at all.

As a matter of fact, there are those two groups in the New Deal. It's hard to define them very accurately, except to say that the one is pretty much left-wing while the other is well, liberal.

And some of the liberals are beginning to get a trifle fed up with the left-wingers. One of them remarked the other day that if the Dies committee makes some of the left-wing crowd run for cover it will be doing Roosevelt a service.

Sub Sinking Draws Inventors

Speaking of the navy; every submarine disaster seems to bring all of the country's crank inventors to the fore, instantaneously. The submarine Squallus went down late in the afternoon; immediately the Navy Department phones started to ring, and they rang all night. A couple of officers in the operations section had to stay up all night to answer them.

One white-bearded gentleman came down to the navy yard in person with a couple of metal shackles in his hand; the navy to make two just like them, only big, hook one onto each end of the sunken sub, and then haul it to the surface.

The navy tries to be nice to all of the people. In the first place, they are American citizens, well-intentioned, who deserve a decent hearing. In the second place, they are voters, and the navy's fate is forever in the voters' hands.

And, lastly, there's always an outside chance that one of these gentlemen will actually have an idea that can be used... although it has never happened yet.

Royalty Gets Reverse Formality

When King George visits the Washington navy yard he will get all of the honors the book of regulations prescribes—but he'll get them in the wrong order.

The U. S. Navy doesn't have much experience with kings, but when it meets them it gives them the same honors that the President of the United States gets. That is to say that the visitor is "piped over the side" to the burbling trill of a bosom's whistle, while eight sailors—relics of the day when a visitor climbed an 'unstable sea-ladder and needed actual physical help—stand by respectfully.

Reaching the deck, the visitor faces a guard of honor which snaps to present arms, and a band which gives

The Sun company, Dallas, Texas, as drilling superintendent in the Burk Burnett fields.

Connecting with Arkansas Natural Gas company in 1923, the new manager here was sent to Pine Bluff as superintendent. In that capacity he assisted in construction work for Arkansas Louisiana Gas company throughout its properties, and helped install gas systems in a number of communities.

Mr. Steffey, whose wife died several years ago, has three sons: W. H. Steffey, manager of the Arkansas Louisiana Gas company at Pittsburgh, Texas; Wallace, who will enter college this fall to study for the ministry, and Paul, who has moved to Hope with his father.

The new manager is a Mason, a Shriner. He took an active part in Pine Bluff business and civic activities and has many friends throughout this section who are congratulating him on his promotion.

Grover Hands Out Some Tips
for Presidential Candidates

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Remaining a presidential candidate for a whole year without getting too far out in front or too far behind is ticklish business, if done right, and a heap of mistakes can be made before the 1940 national conventions.

Just now a candidate with a "Van" as part of his name would be sunk before the start. "Van," as in Senator Vandenberg, is no handicap, however. That is Dutch and they haven't gone Nazi or Communist in Holland.

Presidential candidates can still kill babies, with moderation. It is good build up and keeps a man's face in the papers—but the babies MUST be under 17. Senator Reynolds of North Carolina isn't a presidential candidate—unless very recently—but a couple of years back he killed the late Jean Harlow for publicity purposes. North Carolina didn't like their Bob kissing Jean on Page 1. They let him know about it during the campaign, but they didn't quite toss him out of the Senate.

A candidate can do well for himself on a public issue but it ought to have a lasting flavor.

Foreign affairs are risky and the President always has most of the aces in that game. Vandenberg, a Republican entry, and Senator Clark of Missouri, a Democrat, have gone 100 per cent isolationist. That is taking the long chance.

Anybody being pro-English just now is likely to make enemies of a lot of German and Irish stock in this country—to be pro-German is to be considered a Nazi.

You Have to Be Good

Best bet: Be 100 per cent American, for the Monroe Doctrine, for a Navy corps strong enough to protect the American fireside. Protect American interests everywhere, but, assure, that not one drop of American soldier blood shall be spilled on foreign soil. There are contradictions in that, but if a presidential candidate can't get around them he isn't clever enough to be President anyway.

On domestic affairs, cut the budget to the bone, oust the Bureaucrats, but discharge not a single deserving Federal employe.

For the first time in six years a candidate can be for business, big and little, but not too much. Harry Hopkins, now Secretary of Commerce is working that side of the street.

Lowering taxes without reducing revenue is a good summer speech post-boiler. Another summer trick is to catch a trout about eight feet from a camera.

Some doubt whether young Tom Dewey's caterpillar moustache will summer well out in the West. Cowpunchers and ranchers from the prairie like 'em scraped off clean or else sticking all over.

Six inches more height would help Mayor LaGuardia. He may have name trouble too. It has been generally accepted that his forebears came from Italy, not a popular country here just now, but at a recent Washington hearing the Mayor remarked that his people "sailed from Spain."

Farley Gets Votes

If party organization will do the trick, Postmaster General Farley will have an inside track for the coming year. He can pin down delegations. A good family name helps. It made votes for President Roosevelt in 1892 and would make votes for Senator Taft of Ohio and Senator Bennett, Champ Clark. But names can boomerang.

A sense of humor is good, but candidates can't be too funny. In spite of his nearly 70 years, Vice-President Garner has forged ahead with wise cracks always combined with sage advice given pithily. A brand of calm statesmanship is not bad. That's Secretary of State Hull's bid.

A candidate can be neat, but not gaudy. The Lucius Beeches will never lead the country back to normalcy. And the days of sockless Jerry Simpson and baggy trousers are passed—unless we have a revival of saggy individualism.

But if things get that haywire, anything can happen.

To Use Pontoons

Experts Declare Salvage
Task Most Difficult in Naval History

START ON SATURDAY

Floats Will Be Lowered and Then Filled With Compressed Air

BULLETIN

PORTSMOUTH, N. H. — (AP) — Working swiftly to take advantage of a calm sea and fair weather—using new helium-oxygen mixture recently developed by the navy—workers were lowered to the water-filled hull of the submarine Squallus shortly before noon Saturday to complete ground work for the raising of the craft and cargo of 26 dead.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — The navy's technicians gave approval Friday for the use of pontoons in the grim job of raising the sunken submarine Squallus with its burden of 26 dead.

Great steel floats already at the scene off the New Hampshire coast, will be sunk alongside the Squallus and then filled with air in the attempt to lift the vessel 240 feet to the surface.

Compressed air also will be employed to make the helpless hulk more buoyant, under plans which were given official endorsement at protracted conferences here.

With all but preliminary salvage work suspended, two ace rescue experts, Commanders A. R. McCann and A. I. McKee, sped here by plane Friday for advice on operation plans of Rear Admiral C. W. Cole, in charge at the scene.

The return early Saturday is expected to be the signal for an actual start on what experts termed the most difficult salvage job in naval history.

Confident that available equipment, which includes nine 32-foot long pontoons, was sufficient for the task was expressed by Commander McCann. Each pontoon is capable of lifting from 80 to 85 tons.

"Nobody has a definite idea just how long the job will require," McCann said.

Experts said that in raising the Squallus compressed air would be used to expel at least some of the water from the flooded compartments, thereby adding to the buoyancy of the hulk and aiding the lift on the pontoons.

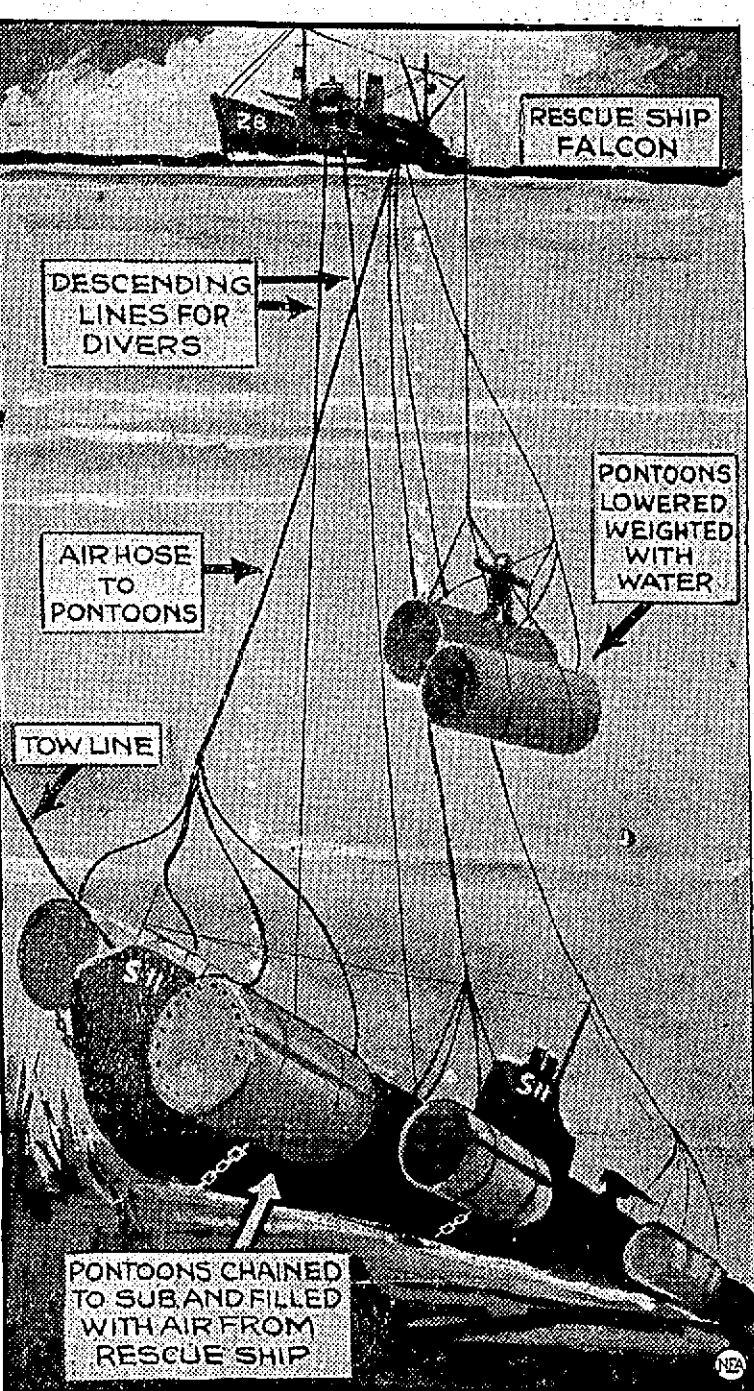

Both to aid and to gain experience, an entire class of 13 fledgling divers from the navy diving school here was dispatched Friday night to Portsmouth.

The tragedy of the Squallus was not permitted to delay the navy's expansion program. Bids were opened Friday for three more submarines of the same size and general type of the Squallus, along with proposals for the construction of a smaller submersible and four 1800-ton destroyers.

Funds to start work, included in the $773,000,000 naval appropriations bill which President Roosevelt signed Thursday, will not become available until July 1. Bids were asked in advance to save time.

The Electric Boat company, Groton, Conn., sole bidder on the submarine, asked $2,937,000 for the three larger craft, with adjustments or changes in labor and material costs. To this must be added nearly $1,000,000 each for equipment supplied by the navy.

With the closing of the membership campaign known as the "President's Recognition Campaign," a class of more than 50 was initiated into Bois d'Arc Camp, Woodmen of the World, at a meeting held here Friday night.

The meeting was attended by a large delegation, with seven counties of Southwest Arkansas being represented.

Albert Graves, former mayor of Hope, was the principal speaker on the program, and among others appearing on the program was State Manager, B. B. Raglan, of Little Rock; Homer Bearden, head consul, jurisdiction of Arkansas, and District Deputy Tom Adams, of Nashville.

State Manager Raglan was accompanied by a degree team of Little Rock which put on the initiatory class work.

Organized in 1895 Bois d'Arc Camp, No. 28 Woodmen of the World, held this meeting in celebration of its 44th anniversary. The camp was organized with a charter membership of 12, four of whom survive as follows: Dr. J. H. Weaver, J. A. Sullivan, and Syd L. Reed, of Hope and W. E. Porterfield, of Little Rock.

REDLANDS, Calif. — (AP) — Foresters believe they have discovered a major weapon against fires, which are an ever-present danger in the dry, southern California mountains.

The area around Arrowhead lake will be planted with the "heat-resistant" knobby cone pine. Under the intense heat of fire conditions, the cones of this tree open and drop seeds, which germinate after the fire is over.

Women on the Jury

Probably it will come as a surprise to most readers to learn that in only 25 states have women the right to sit on juries.

Illinois and Montana have just taken the required action. Of these 25 states, only 13 make jury service compulsory for women as well as for men.

Why, then, that was all settled back in 1913 when the suffrage was adopted? But not so. Neither the complexities of the American federal state government relationships, nor the intricacies of the law itself permit such simplicity.

For instance, in Illinois, all that was necessary was to insert "of both sexes into the existing jury law. You see, the law had provided that jurors should be chosen from the voters. That would seem clear enough to the lay mind. The assumption is that since women became voters in 1913, they were thereupon eligible for jury duty. But not so. In 1925, the state supreme court was still holding that the law meant "men voters." As a matter of fact, various states led by Michigan, began giving women the right to serve on juries as early as 1915.

But this survey of the "women-on-juries" situation by the Council of State Governments shows, conversely, that in 23 states women have neither the right nor the duty to serve on juries. This, mark you, is 20 years after the granting of the suffrage.

It is a curious quirk of mentality indeed, which concedes women the ability to vote for the presidency, for the largest national issues, for state, county, and local officials, yet not the ability to decide whether the man stole the $150 or not.

The old arguments are still being advanced: it would cost too much to provide special quarters for women jurors, women lack logical judgement and make their decisions on sentiment, and so on.

We'll confess the latter argument would carry a little more weight if there were more clearly evident a spirit on sweet reasonableness and clear logic on the part of the male leaders of the world at the moment.

Perhaps women are not completely logical in their judgements. But in today's cockeyed world, who is?

Body Builds Own Defenses Against Infections If Given a Chance

Were it not for the fact that each of us possesses within our body mechanisms which mobilize when war on the integrity of the organism occurs, the human race would soon disappear. The human body is constantly subjected to innumerable forms of attack.

We have to have a certain definite temperature. In the maintenance of this temperature, we are troubled by heat and cold. When the skin is intact it can resist all sort of invasions but when it is broken or cut, germs can get in. The bones may be broken by force but they may be weakened by failure to secure a suitable diet. If we are in an altitude that is too high or in a place where the pressure on the surface of the body is too great, we succumb to our surroundings.

The human body possesses mechanisms for meeting each of these emergencies to a certain extent. Beyond the point at which it cannot further react comes breakdown and possibly death.

The best example of the way in which the body can fight an infection is seen in the case of a pimple. A pimple will occur where there has been failure to keep the skin clean or where there has been a slight injury or where for some other reason the circulation has become poor and the tissues weakened.

The germs which produce infection are always around us—in the air and on the surface of our bodies, and frequently they collect particularly in open pores or around the roots of the hair. If for any reason the tissues are weakened, these germs begin to multiply and to develop poisonous materials when they are alive or as a result of their own death, and then to irritate the cells of the body.

This irritation sets up a reaction and may actually damage the walls of the tiny blood vessels in the skin. Then the material gets out of the blood vessels and the white blood cells begin to gather in the region and to take up the poisons and the germs which are responsible for the infection. The white blood cells and the material from the blood will wall off the infected area so that the infected material cannot spread.

Understand the condition squeezes the pimple very hard or presses upon it, they may break down this wall before, it is fully formed and thus actually cause the infection to spread into the rest of the body.

If, however, the pimple is allowed to go through the process which we call "ripening," the infected material is seen as a white fluid under a thin skin. At this time the pimple may break or be broken so that the infected material will be released from the body. Thus the reaction that has taken place in the skin has served to protect the body as a whole.

Obviously, when this reaction takes place somewhere in the interior of the body as, for example, in the appendix, it is impossible for the infected material to get out without having the appendix break. Moreover, if the appendix breaks, the infected material gets into the interior of the abdomen and may there set up what causes peritonitis.

It is in cases of this type that the doctor and the surgeon contribute most. They know how to localize infection and at the proper time how to release it so that the spot at which the infection occurs may become clean and the body as a whole become saved from general infection and subsequent death.

Snake-Killing Phensant
SCOTT'S BLUFF, Neb.—(AP)—State highway patrolmen noticed a phensant hopping about excitedly alongside the road north of Scott's Bluff. Investigating, they discovered the bird had killed a giant bull snake by pecking its neck full of holes.

'Rattlesnakes Always—'
Don't You Believe It!
BUTTE, Mont.—(AP)—W. T. Sweet, whose hobby for years has been the study of rattlesnakes, says a lot of the popular beliefs about the reptiles are not founded on fact.

Debunking some popular fancies, he says: Rattlesnakes do not go blind in August; they cannot stand the hot summer heat of the sun on their bodies; they do not like to fight; they will not strike unless disturbed or frightened; they cannot strike further than half the length of their bodies and they do not always miltle before striking.

On January 2, the sun is about 3,110,000 miles near the earth than at any other time.

Florence Nightingale—First Wartime Nurse

THE Crimean War broke with a horrible toll in the spring of 1854, but death on the battlefields was only the beginning. The real toll followed in the shambles that served as base hospitals, the Turkish barracks at Scutari.

Reports of the disease and the suffering and the dying filtered out from Scutari and back to England and the result was intense feeling at home. There was a call for women to nurse the soldiers. Florence Nightingale, daughter of an upper middle-class English family, heard that appeal and headed a mercy expedition which turned the course of history on all battlefields.

Florence Nightingale and a group of 34 nurses arrived in Turkey on the day of the bloody battle of Inkerman. There were 2300 patients in one barracks alone and before night the number had swelled to 5000—victims of Inkerman.

But the number of men was not so staggering as was the array of disease and filth that confronted Miss Nightingale and her volunteers. She found mattresses strewn in the corridors, the wards permeated with cholera, fever and poisoning. Men had no adequate diet, wounds were undressed, there was mud in the beds.

That was the task Florence Nightingale faced—and conquered. She reduced the death rate from 42 to 2 per cent at Scutari. At the same time she set a pattern of wartime humanity which has endured for all time. She is shown above on a current Belgian stamp. (Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.)

Rest

Are you very weary? Rest a little bit. In some quiet corner, fold your hands and sit.

Do not let the trails that have grieved you all the day haunt this quiet corner; drive them all away!

Let your heart grow empty of every thought unkind.

That peace may hover round you, and joy may fill your mind.

Count up all your blessings, I'm sure they are not few.

That the dear Lord daily just bestows on you.

Soon you'll feel so rested, glad you stopped a bit.

In this quiet corner, to fold your hands and sit.

Play in Vacation Clothes That Suit YOU

Feet first into the pool... Helen Parrish, motion picture star, wears a smart, one-piece swim suit of elastic material in white satin.

Going up!... Hollywood star Nan Grey shows off her comfortable play overalls of bleached blue denim, worn with or without blouse.

By MARIAM YOUNG
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
NEW YORK—There's endless variety in collections of smart vacation clothes. Regardless of your shape, size, height or coloring, it's a fairly simple matter to find summer costumes to suit YOU—as well as your budget.

For the conservative there are perfectly cut slacks, shirtwaists dresses with action sleeves and full hemlines, play outfits with simple shorts and matching skirts which button down the front, classic sweaters and sports jackets for the woman who is happiest in informal togs.

For the less conservative woman, not of the tailored type, playclothes edged with ruffling, instead of simple bindings, and dressmaker bathing suits. The Gay Nineties note in beachwear will be prevalent at northern resorts.

New for the beach is a sunbather which ties under the chin with ribbon and is handy because it can be flattened out. New, too, is a printed bathing suit of elastic fabric.

Bench coats, with hoods and hemlines that strike midway between knee and ankle, are featured. White plaid sports dresses with bright leather belts will be used for golf. Full, knee-length shorts as well as full, knee-length skirts will go to tennis. Above-knee-length overalls, called "short-talls," come in denim in Grand Canyon colors and are very flattering.

Your Clothes Should Be Appropriate to the Place

An inexpensive wardrobe might include denim "shortalls" with a matching shirt-jacket, slacks, shorts, a skirt and an extra skirt. These pieces, in two colors, can be matched and mixed. For the less limited budget, a gray flannel sports suit, plus navy flannel slacks and a couple of shirts and a sweater or two, would be perfect. The initial cost of such classics usually is fairly high, but they last.

The important thing to consider is whether or not they are one hundred per cent right for the place at which they will be worn.

RAISING A FAMILY

By Olive Roberts Barton

Children Must Be Shown that Cheat Defrauds Only Himself

"Mummy," said Muriel, "I cheated today on the examination. You don't care about it, do you, if I pass?"

Mother looked at her nine-year-old, as though she were trying to recall somebody she knew. She said soberly, "You did? Tell me about it."

"Well, I know it costs you a lot to send to Miss Smith's, and you and daddy always thought I'd get through this term. But when the arithmetic problems were passed around, I knew I could get no more than one or two right. They were all about things I missed when I was sick. So I got Muriel to pass me her paper and I copied."

"I am just disappointed in you, dear, that's all. I would rather you had failed the whole examination than gotten help. That was dishonest."

"Oh, that's all right. All the girls cheat. I'm almost the only one that never did. They tell each other all about it. It is kind of smart to do things right under Miss Smith's nose."

Mother, wistfully, fast now. Here was a child with almost every "justification" there was—first, to save her parents half a year's tuition, second, the example of her friends.

Then, too, there was the fact that the inexperienced child had frankly confessed. A real cheat would scarcely do that, would she?

There was danger of setting up a wall between herself and Muriel. But at the same time, the child must know how serious her offense was.

So mother said, "Muriel, look here. I was often a bad girl. I did lots of naughty things. But I never cheated. That was one thing I could never do. If I had cheated once, I would have probably done it again. Then I would have become sly. And your father would never have married a sly woman. It tells in the face. I can tell it now on you. You don't look quite the same."

"Suppose you go and tell Miss Smith, but don't get Muriel into it. Tell her you will stay back. And never cheat again."

I thought this mother extremely wise.

THEATERS

NEW

A variety of attractive locales from the background for the story of "Climbing High," starring Jessie Matthews and coming preview Saturday 11 p. m. Sunday and Monday at the "New" theater as 20th Century-Fox presentation.

Carol Reed, noted director of "3 on a Week-end," who guided the production of "Climbing High," has given the picture a real touch of authenticity through the perfect settings used.

A huge advertising agency office and studio is featured in all its interesting details. It is here that Jessie Matthews is a model and meets Michael Redgrave, a millionaire posing as a job-hunter. The action switches also to a smart, luxurious restaurant and to Jessie's living quarters, a large studio where her pals, Tucker McGuire and Alister Sim, are a sculptress and a writer, respectively.

But the most impressive of the sets seen in the picture is the of a Swiss vacation resort, where we see Jessie and her leading man indulging in the perilous sport of mountain-climbing to get out of reach of Jessie's brother who is after Michael's scalp.

"Climbing High," is said to be Jessie Matthews' best picture to date and is heralded as one of the most scintillating and entertaining comedies of the year. Its cast includes Noel Madison, Francis Sullivan and Margaret Vyner, and it was directed by Carol Reed.

Louisiana's Tax Free Plan Rapped

Bob Maestri, However, Is Credited With Great Use of WPA

NEW ORLEANS.—(P)—Governor Richard W. Leche's 10-year tax free plan for new industries opening in Louisiana was assailed Friday by an Oklahoma newspaper editor who at the same time credited Mayor Robert S. Maestri of New Orleans with making better use of WPA money than any mayor in the United States.

"Leche's tax-free plan is the worst form of class legislation," Walter M. Harrison, managing editor of the Daily Oklahoman (Oklahoma City) told the annual session of the Southwestern Building and Loan conference.

"The industries that are already in the state are the ones that will have to bear the cost for the new industries," Harrison said. "That puts the burden on the people who have been here and paying taxes. But remember—nothing is said about what the tax will be on these new industries after the 10 years are up."

Maestri, Harrison said, is trying to give this community dollar for dollar from the WPA funds advanced the city.

"The best piece of WPA work in the United States," the editor continued, "is being done in New Orleans. I believe Maestri is getting more work and reality out of every WPA dollar than any other mayor in the country."

HIGHLIGHTS FROM LATEST BOOKS

OLD-TIME DOCTORS HAD TO BE HARD

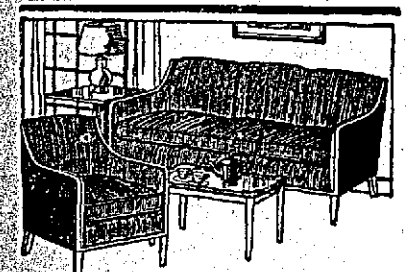

Graphic picture of pioneer life in Texas is "Gringo Doctor" by Dr. J. J. Bush (Caxton: $3). Dr. Bush was physician and surgeon to everybody from cowboys to Mexican revolutionaries, many times escaped death by inches. He describes here the life of the early southwest doctor.

Much was required of the pioneer physician. He had to be a man of resources. If he was not, he went down. At times he must be a physician, nurse and druggist. His colleagues were too far away to be of assistance, and it was up to him to meet emergencies as they arose and acquit himself accordingly.

If he is met with a case of surgery requiring an anesthetic, he either had to give the anesthetic himself and complete the operation before the patient came out of the coma, or trust the administration to untrained hands. Local anesthesia was unknown except cocaine, and it was more or less dangerous.

I often wonder how the present-day ultra-scientific surgeon would get along if confronted by some of the problems that the pioneer physician faced 40 or 50 years ago. No hospital, no nurse, no assistant, no laboratory, and often no instruments.

One of the visits (to Fort Davis) I remember well. I was driving a team of broncs, half broken but tough as rawhide. Just at sundown I stopped at a ranch lying at the foot of the mountains to get supper and a feed for my horses. From there on to Davis was through Lympia Canyon all the way, and it was dark as the stack of proverbial black cats. I could only give the horses rein and trust to luck. I drove up to my friend's house at one

The Rev. W. R. Hamilton, present pastor of the church, is shown holding the lighted match which set fire to the mortgage held by the Rev. Wallace Rogers, pastor First Baptist church, Vicksburg, Mississippi, under whose pastorate here the erection of the educational building was begun.

Dog Catcher Raises Waif Into Prize Pet

TULSA, Okla.—(P)—This is the rag-to-riches story of Pal Boy, a Boston terrier.

Dog Catcher Easton, who picked Pal in the morning. I had made the 30-mile trip in 12 hours. That drive was the talk of Fort Davis for months to come. A few months ago I made the same trip in less than two hours by automobile.

Boy out of an alley a year ago, a homeless waif of a pup; almost bald and "skinny as a rail."

For a year Easton and his wife fed, trained and cared for Pal Boy. Then came dog show time. Pal Boy was entered. The former little alley dog came away with third prize against dogs their owners valued at from $200 to $500.

China Seeks Help of 3-Power Pact

Opposition From London and Paris Virtually Certain

GENEVA.—(P)—China put in her bid Friday for a place in the three-power pact under negotiations by Britain, Soviet Russia and France.

Dr. C. V. Wellington Koo, Chinese delegate to the League of Nations, dined with Ivan Maisky, the Russian delegate, who is ambassador to London, and sought to convince him that Far East questions should be included in the negotiations.

Moscow alone knew whether the Chinese had any hope of success. Maisky's aides said he would do little more himself than to transmit Dr. Koo's observations to the Kremlin. It was learned that the British-Russian talks have been limited strictly to the European effect of the proposed British-Soviet-French mutual aid alliance.

As much as the Russians would like to have the tri-power pact stretched to the Far East, they feared they might risk too much in submitting the question to London and Paris, where opposition would be virtually certain.

Trio Is Arrested After Fatal Fight

Three Jailed at Fort Smith for Death of Albert Honea

FORT SMITH, Ark.—(P)—First degree murder charges were filed Friday against three Van Buren men in connection with the fatal beating of Albert Honea, 53, also of Van Buren.

His skull and jaws fractured and his chest crushed, Honea was found by berry pickers at the south end of the Arkansas river bridge near Van Buren. He died at a Fort Smith hospital.

Charged with the murder were Bill Ballentine, Andy Widner and Clarence E. Miller. Prosecuting Attorney Paul Wolfe, who filed the charges, said the trio also was charged with gambling.

Wolfe said the trio and Honea participated in a fight and that Ballentine was accused of the actual slaying.

$1,366,000 Expected From Congress to Control Pink Boll Worm

WASHINGTON.—(P)—A group of cotton leaders expressed confidence Friday after a round of Capitol Hill conferences, that Congress would appropriate $1,366,000 to control the spread of the pink boll worm.

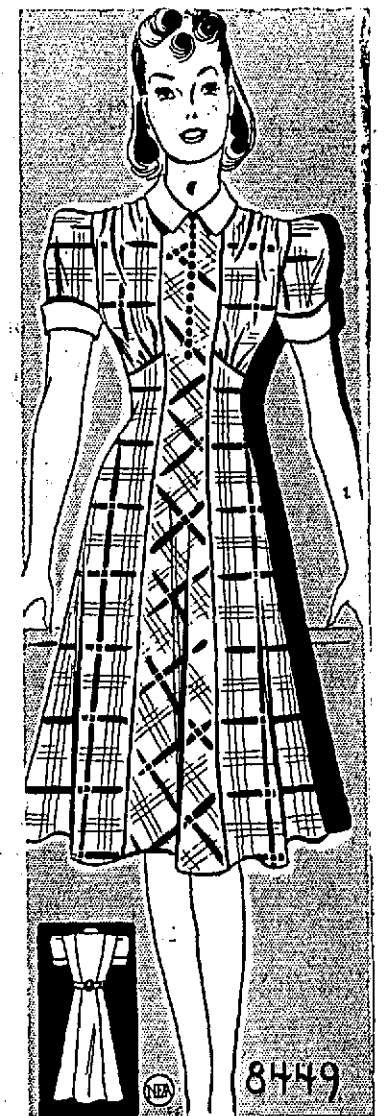

Representatives of the industry appealed to Southern and Southwestern legislators to use their influence in getting this sum, which the Senate approved two weeks ago.

The house has set up in the agricultural appropriation for fiscal 1940 an item of only $446,000 for the eradication program. This provision, with others in controversy, now goes to a conference committee representing the Senate and House.

Bright New Scotch Design For Budget-Minded Women

By CAROL DAY

If you want something semi-tailored for summer travel or to wear for business in town, something that looks simple without being severe, choose this new design, Pattern 8449.

Whether or not there's a bit o' Scotch in your blood you'll love it in plaid—either thin wool or gingham—or in one of the new checked silks. It will be lovely in printed pique or calico, too, with crisp white collar and cuffs.

This dress has unusually good lines, for the bodice is gathered, the waistline tiny and fitted in closely by side belts that fasten down the back.

A row of little buttons marches from neckline to waist, onto the straight front panel. It's a pretty, youthful dress. This pattern is one you'll make up time and again, for it's truly year-round.

Pattern 8449 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 requires 4-1/2 yards of 39-inch material; 1-3 yard contrasting for collar and cuffs.

The new SPRING and SUMMER PATTERN BOOK, 32 pages of attractive designs for every size and every occasion, is now ready. Photographs show dresses made from these patterns being worn; a feature you will enjoy. Let the charming designs in this new book help you in your sewing. One pattern and the new Spring and Summer Pattern Book—25 cents. Pattern or book alone—15 cents.

Dying—And Doesn't Know It

Because the Chattanooga News printed a story mentioning his ambition to be a jockey and win the Derby, 16-year-old Fred Roy, Jr., smiles and jokes with his nurse as he sits in his baby bed at a Chattanooga hospital. What Fred, called "Small Change" because he's only four feet tall, doesn't know is that he is dying by reason of his unbalanced anatomy—and that when the News published its piece about him it told the true story, then ran a special edition of six copies for "Small Change"—so that he would never know.

Bob Sikes Winner Over Montgomery

Pine Bluff Boxer Knocks Out Montgomery in Second Round

LITTLE ROCK.—Bob Sikes, who knocked out Lloyd Montgomery in the seventh round at Pine Bluff, did it in the second before a crowd estimated at 3,000 at the American Legion stadium Friday night. The punter-physiognomist of Pine Bluff punched the Bauxite 181-pounder to the canvas for keeps midway of the second round.

Sikes, who learned fighting fundamentals in a CCC camp two years ago, bow-legged Montgomery before the latter knew what it was all about. Displaying decided superiority in the first round, "Bustin' Bob" moved Monty goggle-eyed with three punches in the next.

Obedient orders from his manager, Ed (Pappy) Stein, and Tommy Freeman, former welterweight champion, who seconded him, Sikes stalked out for the kill as the second round opened. Grinning almost disdainfully at Lloyd's peevish jabs, Bob waded in with a half crouch and hooked to the chin with a snapping left.

The sock shook Montgomery from his eyebrows down. He reeled on his heels and was dispatched to the mat with a half right cross. Lloyd wasn't out completely. He glanced over just in time to see his mentor, Harry McDermott, signal "take nine."

Montgomery got up slowly, staggered forward with a bewildered look on his face and caught another, this time a full right hook to the head. He pitched face forward. It was all over! But the shouting, Lloyd managed to get up on one knee but remained in that position as Referee Joe Red clicked off the final count.

High Water Threat to State Lowlands

White River Goes to Near Flood Stage—Arkansas Is Rising

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(P)—Dwellers in Arkansas, oft-threatened lowlands kept a weather eye on slowly rising streams Friday as heavy rains showed no signs of abating.

The United States weather bureau here, forecasting more showers Saturday, said there might be danger of overflow if the rain continued 48 hours longer.

The White river was on the rise at Newport with a stage report Friday of 20.3, less than six feet under flood stage. The river was six inches over flood stage of 21 feet at Clarendon.

The Arkansas was at low stage through the Arkansas valley but slow rises were predicted.

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. If you want to read a letter in front of another person, should you ask his permission?
2. Should a man stop a woman acquaintance on the street, and stand talking to her?
3. Should a young girl rise when she is introduced to a woman?
4. Is short-cake eaten with a fork or spoon?
5. Should a guest who does not want to drink coffee ask his hostess if he may have tea?

What would you do if—
You step by a friend's house and... see that she is all ready to go out...
Would you—
(a) Say, "You're all ready to go some place. I'll stop by another day?"
(b) Stay if she insists?
(c) Say nothing, and stay only a short while?

- Answers.
1. Yes.
2. No. If he wants to talk to her, he should walk along with her.
3. Yes.
4. Fork.
5. No. It is up to the hostess to make such a suggestion.

Dog Is Chloroformed, Buried With Master

YADKINVILLE, N. C.—(P)—Pope Bryant loved his dog. So when the 41-year-old farmer died the animal was chloroformed and buried in the grave with him at the Fall Creek Baptist church. Bryant died a year earlier, and he asked his neighbors to put it to death so it would not have to grieve at his own death.
